"Dr. Empringham's statement that the Eighteenth Amendment has sounded the knell of prohibition on the contention that various societies have given up their programs of education, is in my mind not a fair statement. If education has ceased, it is not the fault of the Eighteenth Amendment but the fault of ourselves. The amendment has not driven people to drink; it has simply revealed lack of self-restraint in many Americans.

"When people of wealth and position have their own bootleggers— 'there is something rotten in Den-mark.' I have lived in Chicago all my life and know the city intimately and know there is not drinking and drunkenness here as there was before the Eighteenth Amendment, when in 7000 saloons men could be seen at almost any time lined up against the bars and drunkenness and poverty and abuse of families were rampant among drinkers. I am not speaking for the church or the se but for myself.'

Health, rather than prohibition has engaged the attention of the author of the report, Dr. Empringham, during the last few years, Mrs. Boole asserted.

"A paper called Law Observance was published with Dr. Empringham as editor, but it is supposed that lack of support from members of the organization · caused its discontinu-ance," she declared. "Then there appeared a publication called Health Education, with Dr. Empringham as editor, representing the new center of the Health Education Society in New York and published at 1042 St. Nicholas Avenue, New York City. Health education upholds the viewpoint advanced at St. Thomas' House where a free clinic is maintained in the effort to convince the public that most diseases result from wrong

Mrs. Sherman Backs Law

The report does not merit attention, said Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who is here to confer with officers of both the New York State and New York City Federations of Women's Clubs. "I believe in enforcing the Volstead Act so long as it is on the stat-ute books," said Mrs. Sherman. "I believe in keeping it on the statute books and I am opposed to opening up the prohibition subject again. For omen who feel as I do the report has no significance whatever."

Dry women regard the report as of no importance, said Mrs. Gordon Norrie, a member of the Episcopal Church and of the Women's National Law Enforcement Committee. "The report does not represent opinion, and since it marks no change of attitude on the part of the Temperance Society, it is of no consequence," declared Mrs. Dr. Charles K. Gilbert, temporary rector of St. Thomas's Church, and executive secretary of the social service commission of the Episcopal Diocese of New York, said: "I am amazed at Dr. Empringham's statement. 'The old conditions of liquor drinking and corruption before pro-hibition demanded remedial treatment," he said, "and as an experimental remedy the Volstead Law was commendable; but it has not been and is not being enforced. "If prohibition is to be enforced, however, three things will be neces-sary: the Federal Government must cut off the supply of alcohol at its sources; the state governments must accept responsibility for local administration of the prohibition law, just as they do with public education and the people must co-operate by giving their active moral and financial support."

Germany is trying to carry a volume of production with a volume of banking credit, and the monetary resources are inadequate to the existing price level. The Pontiac is a quality car at a popular price. It is for the market between Chevrolet and Oldsmobile and further rounds out General Motors' program of "A Car for Every Purse and Purpose."

Every resource of General Motors' purchasing power, manufacturing economies, engineering and research has been put into the Pontiac. It comes as a tried and proved car; for many months it has stood the most exhaustive tests at General Motors' great Proving Ground in Michigan.

The Pontiac "Six" is produced and mar-keted by the Oakland division of General Motors as a companion to the Oakland Six. It is another example of the quality and value made possible by a group of strong companies working together.

'AVIATION AIDED IN NEW ENGLAND

Service of Colonial Lines Expected to Be Under Way by April 1

Commercial aviation, first introduced to New England by promoters of "blue sky" schemes, has been at standstill in this section. "Manon Lescaut"

The Chicago Civic Opera Company gave Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" last night at the Boston Opera House. The principal members of the cast of the past.

Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" is not one of his most effective operas. To be sure, it contains much agreeable music, but not always music in the composer's most characteristic style. And then, too, the setting inevitably invites comparison with Massenet's treatment of the same subject, not greatly to the advantage of Puccini. The essence of the subject, so admirably caught by Massenet, seems to have escaped Puccini somewhat, and while the scene and incidents of the Abbé Prévost's story might have passed in any country, they are typically French in their associations; consequently Puccini's Italianized musical version is out of keeping with the atmosphere of the story. By far the most successful music from this point of view is that which accompanies the dancing lesson in

Then the American outsprinted the German, who was unable to take the German, who was unable to take the corners. Paulen was left 20 yards behind by Cecil A. The few rules for the care of books in a home, for the books, that is, which one wants to keep and reread and which the family will want to read as it comes up and along, parallel in a way the rules for the kindly and wise treatment of roses in the home garden. Books may not be snipped off the

The Plowboy on Byron's Poetry

THE celebration of the Byron unfortunately did not do so in sucastonish the plowboy, who believed intervene. at Waterloo he knows he must be circumspect. Out of deference to the sentiment against war, he may not adicate here the reactions of his thought to the description of this, the finest martial poem in our language—not even give voice to the emotion evoked by the single line,

"And the deep thunder, peal on peal afar."

When he describes an object, an action, an event, his description is per fect-he adds nothing to what he saw, and he saw all that was visible When he describes the Alps I know that the description is a duplicate of those actual mountains. How do I know it, since I never saw those mountains? I know it because of his descriptions of things I have seen. I have seen a thunder storm by night. And what I saw and heard and felt and loved, I saw and heard and felt and loved again when I read his description of such a storm by night in the Alps; though, of course, he saw and felt and loved more in His first view of those mountains evoked this splendid outburst,—

"Above me are the Alps-most glorious Alps— The palaces of Nature, whose vast walls Have pinnacled in clouds their anowy scalps, And throned Eternity in icy halls Of cold sublimity," succeeded by reflections of tenderness, as in his boat on the breast of Leman he glides, likening the murof its waves to the gentle reof of a sister's voice. Is there any other spectacle in nature so beautiful as a thunder storm in the night? But we see sunlight too often to appreciate its beauty. Thunder storms by night, sublime and magnificent, come not often; and I have waited patiently for years to witness one; and when it came, lived more in one moment than in many hundrum days. umdrum days.

In a brief article, I have not space to quote many fine passages that come to my mind, some of which are to be found even in those poems that may not be read entire. Finding many of exquisite beauty, I look ahead and see others more rare, and am tempted to drop some which I have gathered that I may choose others; like a child who roams the woods in spring culling flowers and who, having filled her lap, returns home and then looks wistfully back to the woods and sighs because she could not bring them all. Far from cities and centers of culture, amid the cornfields of the West the plowboy abides, with only a few of the great poets for companionship. So few they are thet the panionship. So few they are that the loss of even one would be keenly felt. If some day both Tennyson and Byron should bid him good-by and pass out through the door of his memory to return no more, he would be poor indeed.

Popular Art

The finest works of art can never be popular. . . . Popular art, even the best of its kind, owes its popularity to the fact that it deals with something apparent to the man in something apparent to the man in the street: art, however sublime, which goes beyond the apparent can never be popular. There is no rea-son, however, why the circle of ap-preciators should be so restricted as at present.—Percy Moore Turner, in "The Appreciation of Painting,"

The first joy to mention is the delightful shortness of the month. Its usual length is twenty-eight days, and one to the good every four years. Even if one has to travel in the teeth of its storms one can button one's coat a little more tightly and smile inwardly. Blow, blow thou winter's wind for thy reign is shorter than any other month in the year. February will soon be torn from the calendar and March shall enter, either lion or lamb.

The fact is winter and spring meet in February. A hedgegrow may be wrapped in snow on one side and on the other be sun-smitten and flushing slightly with the rapturething is a parable. In sheltered nooks delicate green will make its appearance; and woods that nestle in the arms of hills will be uncurling tiny leaves and jewelled blossoms; and birds will begin to win and possess one another, their winter hues giving place to brighter colors; and piping voices are astir and feeling their way to strength. Crocuses prepare to cry from the ground and snowdrops to wave their little flags and perfumed violets to shed their scent upon the breeze, a prelude to primroses. Winter and spring mingle and we are at the

That is to say February is the month of abounding hope. We are visibly moving toward the illuminated miracle of spring; the rich fruitage of summer; the golden harvests of autumn. All the treasures of these seasons are in prospect.

Written for The, Christian Science Monitor I left the little town whose tattered hem Is fingered first by spring's anemones, For, notwithstanding jasmine stratagem, Its little faded homes and friendly trees Evoked in me no poet's imagery. And so I stood before Niagara's swift, terrific force and heard The pounding of its mighty, thunderous roar,—And there the tender twitter of a bird Came faintly to my ears, with grace note chime, Bringing again a cowbell's tinkling sound Far down the lane at home at twilight time.

I stood before stone structures, world renowned,-And saw the old tip-tilted belfry tower That leans a little toward the lake below To see its image, at the sunset hour, Outlined where wondering water lilies grow. I saw a ship, the great Leviathan, Come proudly into port with lifted throat Flecked white with foam.

On my horizon's span, A memory mirage, a slim, blue boat Moored idly to a water-rooted tree Whose shattered petals form a fragrant foam. Where once a red bird called good day to me—Ah, need I tell you I am going home?

DUTCH CHURCH HAS STATION IN ITS TOWER

'Amateur Type of Station Sends Out Services in Bloemendaal

The following description by L. F. Plugge of a Dutch church radio installation is interesting, as it gives as near a pastoral touch to radio as we have seen. It shows the possibilities of the use of radio as a purely local activity.

By CAPT. L. F. PLUGGE LONDON, Jan. 18-We have a habit with regard to wireless to turn to America whenever we look for something novel or exceptional. In this case, however, it is not far away from England that we find the extraordinary feature of a church having a radiocasting station in its tower for the purpose of disseminat-ing the church services. I am referring to what is known in this country as the Bloemendaal Broadcoating Station. Bloemendaal is a picturesque Dutch village which is secret transmitting room. Thas been designed by Arthur H. Lynch to include every popular improvement of receiver design that is practicable for home construction.

The experiences and skill of Radio Engineers, Radio Editors, and amateur set-builders throughout the United States are summarized in this receiver.

While the circuit itself is not new in principle, it is slightly different in its application, and embodies the latest re-finements of the radio art.

From a standpoint of performance, simplicity, and economy of construction and operation, the "UNIVERSAL" is unrivaled.

To the set-builder who expects real re-sults from his set we give our assurance that he will get them from a properly built "UNIVERSAL."

The aerial consists of four parallel wires, separated by two hoops, and thus arranged in cage fashion, stretching from the top of the spire down to a tree in the churchyard. Mynheer Tamis told me that the station had been heard on two or three occasions in Great Britain, but that he did not expect to receive reports from very great distances, as the output of aerial was estimated to be no more than 40 watts. HIS fine new million-dollar hotel is only an overnight railway journey from northern cities, located in the first of the greater developments as you enter Florida.

Its situation is superb—on a twenty-foot bluff overlooking the St. John's River—in a spot where winter forgets and is forgotten—amid some of the most beautiful scenery in the Sunshine State.

A block or two away from the hotel is the 18-hole Donald Ross Golf Course, in the grounds of which is the San Jose Country Club. In equipment, service, cuisine—in everything that conduces to the necessity, comfort and convenience of its guests, the San Jose Hotel equals the best of northern hostelries.

I see a freight train laden with Florida's choicest garden truck—Bradenton grown! I see the boat just docking from her daily trip 'cross beautiful Tampa Bay. Sun-browned, happy folks stream out. Away they go in their shiny, new cars over our miles of paved highways.

Look at the building activity. I see three new skyscrapers which will soon be completed. Beyond are magnificent new homes. Beauty, happiness, substantial activity abound.

There's work, play and action here. I want action. I want play. I want to live in a substantial town, whose bank deposits grow 100 per cent "at a crack"! That's why I prefer Bradenton.

Among the Railroads

By FRANKLIN SNOW THE merger plans of L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware & Hudson and chairman of the Kansas City Southern, more mearly parallel the nation wide scope of operations of E. H. Harriman than those of any of the present executives. While slowly building a system in the Southwest with the Kansas City Southern and the Cotton Belt (St. Louis Southwestern) as a nucleus, he is also believed the Cotton Belt (St. Louis Southwestern) as a nucleus, he is also believed to be working up a consolidation in the trunk line territory.

An application to lease the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh is being prepared now for presentation to the Interstate Commerce Commission. A request for authority to construct a new railroad across Pennsylvania has been heard by the commission. The Wabash, although not directly connecting with the Delaware & Hudson, is another road included in the plans of the Delaware & Hudson it is generally understood. A community of interests may be traced through William H. Williams, vice-president of the Delaware & Hudson and chairman of the Wabash.

A large volume of freight between

Delaware & Hudson and chairman of the Wabash.

A large volume of freight between New England and the Middle West moves by the Delaware & Hudson and Wabash, the Lehigh, the Erie or the Lackawanna being the connecting links between Binghamton and Buffalo. In the Southwest, the Kansas City Southern has a working control in the Cotton Belt which it bought from the Rock Island, when the Interstate Commerce Commission refused the latter's application to take over this road. The Kansas City Southern also has a director on the board of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas and the creation of a third large system in the Southwest appears imminent. Mr.

Large has moved quietly but effect Southwest appears imminent. Mr. Loree has moved quietly but effectively in his merger plans in various railroads in making rates has been advocated again, as a sequence to the successful allocation of freight cars by Shippers' Advisory Boards, acting in concert with the roads. While agreeing that any means of promoting harmonious relations should be encouraged, traffic men are loath to make rate concessions which cannot be revised if found unsatisfactory later.

Advocates of a general scrambling railroads have never been specific to the actual source of these savgs. The mere creation of monopolitic combines does not force act appropriate combines does not force as the combines does not force as the same appropriate combines are same as the same appropriate combines are same as the same listic combines does not forecast any reduction in freight rates, for the reason that many small companies now are operating with all the efficiency and economy which a larger system could accomplish. Mergers made naturally, rather than under compulsion, or with the stimulus of banking companies which make a profit and then withdraw, hold out the greatest promise of lasting benefit, opinion indicates.

The move to obtain higher wages, by the transportation brotherhoods, equivalent to those fixed in 1920 by the Labor Board, followed the joint appeal of the brotherhoods and a number of railroads to eliminate the Labor Board and substitute a group of mediation and arbitration boards in its place. If the bill agreed upon is passed, the machinery to take the place of one board, in which the public, the infons and the railroads have equal representation, will be called

Sporadic Selling Attacks by Bears of Short Duration

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (P) — Stock prices displayed a strong undertone at the opening of today's market, which was featured by the buoyancy of high priced industrials and specialties.

Oils and motors were heavily traded in, Kelsey Wheel climbing 3% points before the end of the first half hour, and Chrysler, White, Jordan, General Motors, Union Oil of California and California Petroleum advancing 1 to 2½ points.

GRAIN MARKET

PRICES DECLINE

CHICAGO, Feb. 5 (P)—Fresh setbacks in the price of wheat were witnessed today during the early dealings here.

A continued decline in quotations at Liverpool and Buenos Aires was largely responsible for the most part. Selling appeared to be of a scattering kind, but no indications of better export or domestic demand were in evidence.

The opening, which ranged from 7 to 1% c lower, May (new) $1.74@ 1.74%. and July $1.52½@1.52%, was followed by a moderate further sag, with signs lacking of an special power to raily.

Predetions of liberal receipts of corn tended to weaken both corn and oats. After opening ¼ to ½c off, May $3@833cc, the the corn market underwent and active provision market the effect of grain weakness served as more than a counterbalance for higher prices on hogs.

Lower Transportation Cost

The cost of transportation on Jersey Central was the lowest in 1925 since before the war, reflecting benefits of an improvement program put into ef-fect immediately after the return of the property to private control. The ratio of transportation expenses to revenues for the first 11 months was 37.4 per cent, compared with 39.1 per cent the previous year and an aver-age of 45.9 per cent in the preceding five years.

EXPECT 1926 TO BE

That 1926 will be a prosperous year for bus and truck manufacturers is freely predicted by executives of truck companies. The motor truck industry follows closely general business pros-perity, and, with conditions as good as today, it seems next year will be one the first 11 months of 1925 taking 11.2 per cent of revenues, compared with 10.9 per cent in 1924 and an average of 11.8 per cent in the previous five years.

Larger maintenance outlay on both way and equipment exceeded the reconsequence, when the new year arand communities, such as schools, the transportation costs and the readily, is dangerous. Increasing demand from railroads for trucks to act as auxiliary lines for trucks to act as auxiliary lines for the river to the river short hauls seems to hold considerable promise. Competition which faced railroads at the beginning of 1925 has forced them to adopt the truck as an adjunct. In many instances now, where railroads do not own trucking and in foreign countries, is paving the way for more travel by motorbusses. Millions are spent annually by national, state, and county governments to build permanent highways. Bus lines already radiate over the principal highways of the country, with direct lines from New York to Florida and Chiesgo and connections to south.

As to general trade, this change may be significant; for it may denote a slackening of construction activity. The building figures point to this same

COUNTRY'S GROWTH CALLS FOR HEAVY BUILDING PROGRAM

Although the building shortage has een largely overcome, there is no reason for marked recession in building, says the Copper & Brass Research Association. Tremendous normal growth of the country alone calls for the yearly expenditure of close to $5,-000,000,000. Ordinary depreciation can be figured at close to $750,000,000. For 1926 another year of tremendous activity can be expected. Probably $5,500,000,000 will be spent for GOOD YEAR FOR TRUCK new construction, repairs and replacements. The musical instruments are held dutiable at 40 per cent under paragraph appropriates, at 40 per cent under paragraph 399; the paper lanterns, favors, novelties and containers composed of paper, papier-mache or paper board, at 35 per cent under paragraph 1303; and the so-called musical pillows, composed in chief value of cotton, at 40 per cent under paragraph 2103; and the so-called musical pillows, composed in chief value of cotton, at 40 per cent under paragraph 921, act of 1922.

Overruling protests of Sears Roebuck & Co., Montgomery Ward & Co., and oct of 1922.

Overruling protests of Sears Roebuck & Co., Montgomery Ward & Co., and others, of Chicago, the board finds that certain handkerchiefs, trimmings, and other articles, were correctly assessed at 75 or 90-per cent ad valorem under paragraph 1430, act of 1922. "There was nothing in the record," Judge Howell finds in denying relief to the importers, "to justify the board in disturbing the decision of the collector, which is presumptively correct."

Best Grades Touch $13.75-Steers and Cows Lower -Lambs Steady

CHICAGO, Feb. 5 (Special)-The fat steer trade, except on a few specialties of all representative weights, was in the dumps, excessive receipts and bearish factors, according to a report issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, bureau of agricultural economics.

lssued by the United States Department of Agriculture, bureau of agricultural economics.

Hogs, however, continued in the limelight, most classes advancing 40 to 50c, as shippers and large and small packers competed for the comparatively small run as contrasted with a year earlier. In firting with $13 the average cost of hogs was at the high mark for the season. At the high time, the top on kinds scaling 170 pounds down stood at $13.75.

Supply reduction as the week closed stimulated the hoof trade in fat lambs, although the dressed trade remained a bearish item, not only in lambs but in cattle as well. Fat lambs sold largely at $14.25 to $14.75, shippers occasionally paying upward to $15. Sheep and yearlings held actively, gaining price ground in most instances. Shippers took most of the yearling wethers at $12.50 to $13.25, paying $11 to $12 for twos.

$12.50 to $13.20, paying $11 to $12 to: twos.

Entirely too many medium steers arrived, a continuation of the bearish development which had been in evidence for several weeks. By long odds the bulk of the steer run was short feds, and prices were pounded 25 cents, with instances of 35 to 40-cent down-with instances of 35 to 40-cent down-turns.

A large share of the steer run cashed at $3@9.75, the bulk going at $8.75, @$10.25. Only specialtiest—he kind that eastern shippers wanted—held up, best heavies stopping at $11.25 and best yearlings at $11.65. Few year-lings, however, passed $10.75.

The grade for grade premium of yearlings over heavies continued. A droopy stocker and feeder trade, which during the last two weeks has de-clined 25 to 40 cents, is sending more common and medium steers into common and medium steers into slaughter channels, another bearish feature in the trade. Steer values are at new low levels for the season, so far as kinds of value to sell at $10 downward are concerned.

An interesting feature in the bovine trade was the sharpest break of the year in canners, cutters, and common cows. Downturns amounted to 25 to 50c, and although better grades of cows and heavy helfers lost about 25 cents, the abnormally narrow spread recently between common and choice cows is being corrected.

Light heifers on the yearling order sold actively, and for the most part held steady, a spread of $7.50@8.25 taking the bulk.

While European art centers are thoroughly conversant with modernism in all its vagarious moods, New York is slower to embrace the nettlesome issues of an untranmeled art form.

Ever since 1913, when the big Armory Show put modernism on the local map, there have been persistent and persevering attempts to educate New Yorkers along the lines of the Parisian radicals, but with only a limited success. This season, however, it would appear that the newer fashions in painting and sculpture are making considerable headway among the less progressive coteries of the town. The famous Quinn Col-lection, shown just recently for the first time, has created a small furore for modernistic work, and so this Tri-National Exhibition comes in on the crest of a not inconsiderable wave of public favor.

The three galleries of this distinguished house of art are amply filled with paintings and sculpture by French, British and American artists. Mrs. Harriman's policy has been to keep this international affair non-sectarian; while the general cast of the show is modernistic, there has been given place to members of the conservative groups as well. In this way interesting comparisons may be made, not only between the work of the three countries, but between the various schools of each section as well. Thus you have Besnard and Le Sidaner alongside Matisse and Picas-so, McEvoy and Sickert beside Epstein and John, Hassam and Haw-thorne flanking Marin and Kuniyoshi, all of which is thoroughly provocative and enlivening.

France has provided the Big Berthas of the show, as might be

PRAGUE HOUSE MADE INTO MOZART MUSEUM

PRAGUE, Jan. 20 (Special Correspondence) -On the other side of the wide river Vlatva from Prague proper lies the industrial suburb of Smichov. Situated right in the center of factories and workers' houses is an old-fashioned dwelling known as the Bertramka. This relic of the eighteenth century is now being transformed into a Mozart Museum. For it was in this very house that Mozart completed his famous opera, "Don Juan." This opera first saw the light at the old Stavovske The-

It was in the year 1787, and Mdtart was living in the Old Town of Prague. Every day he crossed the river to visit his Viennese friends, the Duscheks. Finally Mme. Duschek ltted up two rooms overlooking the leasant garden into workrooms for he young composer. Now that the last owner of the house has passed tway, the house becomes the proprty of the Mozarteum in Salzsburg, it will be preserved in its original pondition, and scattered Mozart releas will also find a home there.

COAL CONSUMPTION GROWING IN AUSTRIA

VIENNA, Jan. 20 (Special Corre spondence)-Austria has increased ier inland consumption of coal, according to an announcement made in Parliament by the Minister of Comnerce, Dr. Hans Schuerff. This neans two things: First, that Ausria's purchasing capacity is better han it was last year; and second, hat the mining situation in the coun-ry is improving.

Not only has the inland production Not only has the inland production nereased to keep pace with the enarged demand, but also the imports from abroad have mounted as well. If the total consumption, 38 per sent is taken care of by the home nines and the remainder comes nainly from Poland (235,000 tons rom Poland, 70,000 tons from Csecholovakia, and 35,000 from Germany). Justria's total consumption of coal or the third quarter of 1925 was 1025,253 tons of coal, as compared with a lesser amount of 1,920,82 ons for the corresponding period of 1924.

How Pitty-Pat Crossed the Channel

HEN Pitty-Pat heard Cook be if only they would remain at home telling a friend that the Master and Mistress were going die to a strange country that she had never heard of before. to Italy for the winter she pricked up her ears. Cook went on to say in answer to her friend's questioning that she had no intention of going with them, "I'm no kind of a sailor," site said, "and I never did care for the winter she certainly distinct the said, "and I never did care for the winter said, "and I never heard of before. As the days went by and everywhere signs of the committee signs of the comming departure where signs of the comming departure where signs of the coming departure wh

"It doesn't take long to go across the Channel," said Cook's friend.
"To long for me," retorted Cook,
"I prefer to keep my feet on dry land."

"I had been been dry land."

I had been been liked the idea of that great big puddle.

At last the morning arrived when everyone stood waiting to go to the station. "Come here, Pat," said the Mistress and in another than the mistress and the mistres white paws and then she gave each one's little shake as though she were shaking imaginary drops of water from them.

"Oh dear," she sighed, "it is so pleasant here, I wonder why my mistress wants to go away!"

Presently she strolled into the drawing room. "Come here you nice little fluffy thing," coaxed her Mistress, as Pitty-Pat appeared in the doorway. There was no more comfortable place than the Mistress's lap so Pitty-Pat did not wait for a second invitation.

"I don't know what I shall do without my kitten," said the Mistress.

The Master laughed. "Why don't we take her with us?" he said. "Even though we may have to go without anything to eat, as Cook refuses to come with us, we may as well take our favorite plaything."

Pitty-Pat vished so much that they could understand kitten language. She longed to point out to them how very—comfortable they all might liked the idea of that great big

Pitty-Pat began to feel a little anxious. She has no great fondness for water herself. She even objected to the large puddle which always appeared outside the kitchen door after a fall of rain. The Channel must be a very large puddle indeed.

Pitty-Pat looked at her four little white paws and then she gave each one a little shake as though she were shaking imaginary drops of water from them.

EDITORIALS

No doubt thousands of members of a great and worthy church residing in Massachusetts were both shocked and grieved to see on the first page of a Boston Churches and Prohibition paper yesterday this glaring headline: EPISCOPAL CHURCHMEN

WANT BEER A slander, of course. A flippant translation into the vernacular of the headline artist of the substance of a report made public by an organization only indirectly connected with the Episcopalian Church. But it serves very well to emphasize the perils that lurk in the practice of permitting untrained investigators lightly to commit an influential and respectable organization to conclusions and a policy which otherwise would be without force or authority. Probably nothing was further from the intent of the secretary of the Church Temperance Society than to bring disrepute upon his church or to give aid and comfort to the saloon in its struggle for resurrection. But he has done both, In the name of his church—unwarrantably, as many of its bishops insist-he has recommended precisely the policy toward the liquor traffic that is urged by the brewers' association and all the forces which are working for the revival of the liquor power.

At the time when the equally ill-advised pro-liquor report of the Federal Council of Churches was published, The Christian Science Monitor pointed out that the real value of such a report rested wholly upon the extent and accuracy of the investigations whereon it was based. Its danger lay in the fact that conclusions drawn from a superficial and fragmentary investigation would be treated with respect because of the impressive title of the organization presenting them.

We know of no organization, unless it be the United States Census Bureau, which possesses the facilities for making a really trustworthy investigation into the economic, social and moral results of prohibition. For the secretary of a church society to visit a few cities and conduct a questionnaire produces conclusions as grotesque as those of the blind men who went to see the elephant and pronounced him very like a tree, a snake or a fan, according to the portion of the beast's anatomy handled.

It is possible that the Rockefeller or Carnegie Foundation by a liberal use of its resources might create a body of capable investigators and conduct an inquiry that would be conclusive. We know of no public service that would be of more value. But for the individual, or for the society of slender means, the field of inquiry is too great.

By this we do not mean that the individual should dismiss the merits or demerits of prohibition as something beyond his capacity to determine and to be left to the politicians. Within his own environment he can judge with assurance whether good or ill has come of it. He knows whether he or his friends find the speakeasy or the bootlegger more alluring than the open saloon. He knows whether more money goes for cars, travel and household comforts than in days gone by.

If a merchant, he can tell whether his business has gained or lost by the disappearance of the two or three saloons that used to be in his necessity of suggesting to wives the considerations upon which they may determine whether prohibition has been a boon or a curse to them. As the sum of individual opinion is public opinion, each can do his share toward making that public opinion useful by studying his own balance-sheet in account with prohibition, and declaring his conclusions accordingly.

So far as its responsibility for this report is concerned, the Protestant Episcopal Church may be trusted to set itself right before the people. In the Monitor today several bishops repudiate the right of the society to commit the church. and roundly disagree with the opinions expressed in the report. While the incident will. unfortunately, give aid and comfort to the liquor forces, who may be trusted to make the most of it, the vast body of church-going folk-of whatever creed-will ascribe to it only the slender importance that attaches to the conclusions of a superficial examination conducted by amateur investigators.

The introduction by L. T. McFadden, chairman of the Committee on Banking and

Reviving the Branch Bank Issue

Currency of the United States House of Representatives, of a bill providing, among other changes in the national banking law, for the establishment by federal reserve banks of branches in those states permitting branch banking, will precipitate a conflict between powerful financial groups that may seriously affect the renewal of the Federal Reserve System. In one respect the fight in Congress over the proposed amendments differs from past contests over financial legislation, in that the banking interests appear to be hopelessly divided as to the desirability of the proposed changes. It is no longer a contest between the great and powerful banks of the North and East and the smaller institutions of the South and West. The line of cleavage splits the banks of New York, as well as those of other regions, and influential financiers and economists are arrayed on both sides of the struggle for

The preponderance of banking sentiment has up to the present time seemed to be against branch banking, and the influence of a majority of the banks will doubtless be exerted against this provision of the McFadden bill. There is, however, an active minority that holds that if the Federal Reserve System is to be continued the banks included in it should have the privfleges enjoyed by competing state banks, and it is urged that failure to permit branch banking will ultimately result in many reserve banks seeking state charters. Unless this minority can be convinced that it is mistaken, it may join with other interests inimical to the Federal Reserve System, and might possibly defeat the renewal of the charters of the reserve banks.

To some extent the policy of the more influential banks has been to minimize the branch-bank issue, and even to avoid discussion of what is admittedly a very knotty problem. It is manifest that the policy of neutrality cannot be much longer maintained, and that as a generation ago the question of a gold or silver standard had to be faced and squarely dealt with, so now the future welfare of the national banking system demands a definite decision for or against branch banking.

A somewhat careful study of the detailed plan proposed by Warren K. Moorehead of Andover,

Reorganizing the Ameri-can Indian Service

Mass., for the reorganization of the United States Indian Service, will convince any inquisitive student that it is quite the most comprehensive document that has yet been prepared on the subject.

The plan as outlined contemplates a complete revision of the methods and processes adhered to in what, no doubt, has been a conscientious and unselfish desire to safeguard the individual and property rights of the remnants of the original tribes of red men. But even conceding that this has been the laudable desire of the white citizens of the United States, it is still a fact that many abuses have been practiced in the name of progress and civilization, and that not all of these can be corrected by any method.

The plan outlined, quite naturally, contemplates, first of all, the removal of the Indian Service from the realm of political or partisan influence. It is argued, as it has long been reasonably insisted, that it is because of the hampering and selfish influences exerted by politicians that policies have been adopted which have retarded, rather than encouraged, a right solution of the Indian problem. No one has claimed, in recent years, that the white friends of the red men have not realized the right course to be pursued. It has been claimed by the defenders of the present bureaucratic system that the Indian Service is beyond political or partisan control. But Mr. Moorehead quite convincingly shows that this claim is unfounded. He points to the fact that since the year 1834 there have been thirty-two commissioners and one acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the average tenure of each being less than three years. Mr. Sells, the predecessor of the present incumbent, was longest in office, but most of the commissioners, it is pointed out, have been appointed by incoming presidents, those selected usually being of the political faith of the new administration. What is true of the head of the bureau is equally true, it appears, of superintendents, supervisors, field clerks, and others in the service. Mr. Moorehead charges that while most of these are nominally under the Civil Service, convenient ways are found to displace them at will and to give their posts to others.

It is by safeguarding the personnel of the service that it is hoped to make possible the vital reforms sought. To assure this it is proposed that a committee be appointed to select a person thoroughly familiar with all phases of the situation to serve as Commissioner of Indian Affairs. The person so selected should be retained in office indefinitely, just as federal court judges are assured of a continuing tenure during good behavior, and he should be given the support of a staff as carefully chosen. It is proposed that the general staff be selected by a committee composed of the Secretary of the Interior, the secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and the corresponding officer of the National Academy of Science. It is insisted that "because of their high standing, intelligence and knowledge of primitive and dependent peoples, they will be enabled to select the proper officers to give immediate direction to the many phases of Indian affairs." These appointments, it is proposed, shall be continuing, not to be changed by any incoming party.

With this as a starting point, the working out of details of administration and management becomes a comparatively simple matter. The all-important object is to establish a proper basis. The chapter of abuses which have been practiced has been written and rewritten time and again. Few thoughtful persons in the United States are willing to defend the system which has so long been adhered to. Under it the efforts of even the most earnest and conscientious administrator, no matter what his rank, are frustrated.

For centuries past in the national life of many civilized peoples it has been customary to ob-

One Day's

Rest

serve one day in seven as a day of rest and properly conceived recreation. It is true that in certain ages and among certain races the idea has been carried to such an extreme that it became more destructive than constructive, in so far as the spirit of the reform became submerged in the letter of its observance. But as a general thing today it has become recognized that workers in all branches of human occupation reach a higher grade of efficiency if allowed a reasonable amount of time for change of thought and action. The fact, therefore, that the workers in the State of Illinois are unprotected by any legislation making for such harmonious conditions, and that in some instances as a consequence they have been held to almost continuous labor, gives considerable force to the campaign being conducted there for the compulsory six-day week. Efforts toward this end have been made before, but have not obtained success, and the revival of the campaign this year warrants support by all in a position to forward its purpose. In this connection Victor Olander, secretarytreasurer of the Illinois Federation of Labor, and thus representing not far from half a million men and women engaged in industry in the State, believes that there is more reason to hope for success this year than ever before.

It may be granted that many occupations in the complex world of today are of such a nature that those engaged in them cannot expect necessarily freedom from their work every Sunday. But such are entitled to that measure of normal liberty which is represented by reasonable hours of service daily and the six-day week. Some might argue that such a law as the one now being worked for in Illinois only applies to certain more or less limited classes. But even so, the absence of adequate protection militates against that normality and harmony which should be operating in the spirit of the people of every highly civilized nation. No state or community can really afford to stand in the way of what is recognized as actually best for its peoples.

It is not difficult, assuming the premise of Secretary Kellogg to be correct; to reconcile the proposed appropriation of even as large a sum as $11,000,000, to be used in the purchase and establishment of American embassies, legations and consulates in foreign countries, with the Administration's declared program of strict economy. According to estimates made by the Secretary of State, under whose direction the foreign representatives of the United States perform their official functions, the total represents, theoretically, the sum upon which the people are paying an annual interest of 4 per cent. This is upon the showing that $440,000 is paid out yearly in rents for homes and offices of the officials

The number of American representatives abroad has increased gradually with the extension of the country's trade and commerce, and incidentally, with the rearrangement of European territorial divisions since the late war. It is not too much to say that at the same time American prestige has been increased and broadened. With this there should be an effort to uphold, in every proper way, the dignity of those who, in distant lands, live under the protecting folds of the Stars and Stripes. It is explained that, although the United States maintains fifty-one diplomatic missions abroad, only fourteen of these are housed in government-owned buildings. It is stated that in important capitals such as Berlin, Rome, Buenos Aires, Brussels, Stockholm, The Hague, Vienna, Budapest, Warsaw and Lima the American representatives occupy rented buildings for offices and residences and receive no allowance for the cost of residence.

The Secretary points to the fact that it is still true that no man who is not comparatively wealthy can be an ambassador or minister in most of the foreign capitals, and that "to a great extent this Republic, the foremost democratic government in the world, is under the necessity of limiting its choice of diplomatic representatives to men of wealth." It possibly is not the intention of the Secretary to intimate that wealth disqualifies a person for such service. But it is an undeniable fact that the condition described does limit the field of selection when the time comes for assigning suitable men to these posts.

What is said to be impossible under the present system, which makes it necessary to house American officials in separate buildings, sometimes long distances apart, would be achieved by a carefully devised system of independent housing. This is the concentration, under one roof or in a single group, of all diplomatic and consular, as well as all special representatives of the country at a given capital. The sum indicated is not a large one, as wealth is now estimated in the United States. But even if the initial cost were much larger it would be overbalanced by the greater efficiency which would be assured to the service. In addition there would be the accompanying increase in prestige. the value of which cannot be estimated in dollars. It should be as possible for a person of small means to become an ambassador as for him to aspire to the Presidency or to a seat in

Editorial Notes

It really would seem that there is no limit to what mankind may get today if it wants it badly enough, for one reads in the discussion of a report recently put out by the National City Bank, that Chinese babies demanded American baby carriages in 1924 and got them! And so, too, apparently did Indian babies, and Argentinian ones, and Australian, and Mexican and those in the Philippines, since as many as 17,000 such vehicles found their way to no fewer than fifty-five countries in that year. And that wasn't all, either, for we read that American typewriters click in the most distant corners of the globe, motion picture films delight audiences in seventy countries including China, Japan, British India, Australia, Dutch East Indies, with many an etc. Furthermore, American gasoline runs American automobiles in no less than 100 countries, colonies, protectorates and mandated territories; citizens of seventy countries brave inclement weather in American rubber boots and shoes, while merchants of more than eighty countries are keeping their sales records by the use of American adding machines.

Now that the Washington Monument is temporarily closed to the public, for the installation of a new elevator, it is but natural, perhaps, that some of the facts that are associated with it and which have been taken for granted should interestingly be recalled. For instance, not everyone knows that the number going up the monument in a single day has often exceeded 10,000, or that there is not an officially inscribed line anywhere on the monument indicative even of the fact that the structure is in honor of George Washington. The shaft, by the way, was started in 1848, but after 150 feet or so of the total 555 were completed, there was a long period of suspension, due largely to the fact that the movement to finance it by popular subscription collapsed. The present simplicity of the structure was not originally contemplated, for around the base of the obelisk there was to have been a circular colonnaded building, while a decorated shaft, with cornices and up-anddown indentures, etc., was part of the design.

Dublin-A Genial Satire

Every city in the world pays its own piper and calls its own tune. The same song will not do for all. Washington must be taken intellectually, New York with a kind of ecstasy, Paris with a gesture; and you must feel London in your bones like an inner, contenting warmth.

But Dublin is a city to be dwelt in with unspoken affection and sentiment. To use the favorite adjective of the reprehensible but thoroughly enjoyable Joxer in "Juno and the Paycock," Dublin is a "daarlin" city. In other cities one walks about pointing out perfections, breathing the indefinable exhalations of glamour; and tuning iambics. It would be as unthinkable not to praise as it is instinct to revere.

But in Dublin one does not praise. As one's shoes hiss over its moist pavements one accepts it like the rain or the sky, excuses its failings and takes its virtues for granted. It is, so to speak, one of the family: we all apologize for it, but in our hearts is the song, "In Dublin's fair city-" and a dear, lyrical extravagance of feeling.

It is curious, this note of apology in one's talk about Dublin; and it comes, I think, because all Dubliners have London at the backs of their minds. Dublin might be a very small London. As a center of fashion and aristocracy in its day, it claimed the comparison; and though shabby now, and with the plush of its elegant green breeches worn and shining, Dublin still remembers.

The rows of houses have thin streets of unbroken wall. flat and angular as the houses of old prints, and all are built of the same darkened ochre bricks weathered to grays

Window, door; window, door; Every house like the one before.

The bodies of the houses are glum, but light. They have spacious twelve-paned windows and light ranks of iron railings, and brief steps lead from the street to the paneled doors. There are light door pillars and iron knockers. And three or four stories above is the low slate roof, with its long and short chimneys set irregularly like crochets on a stave. Below, a moat between house and street, is the scrubbed area and its waist-deep window looking out of the tops of its eyes at the sky.

All this recalls the London of the Bloomsbury Squares. In London you find a tidy thoroughness, a touch of wisdom and economy-especially economy-a certain impeccability and a definite complacency as though, having commanded the use of brooms and hearthstone, the owners of the houses considered they had fulfilled all the law and

But the streets and squares of Dublin have a soft and indolent gaze. They are kindly and tolerant, unpreoccupied with their appearance, not so much untidy as absentminded, thinking of something else, and on their walls is an idle light which at sunset flares up into blazing impulses of imagination-only to die down and flicker out; and a satirical glumness settles on them. + + +

Sober London does not know these processions of imagination and these inevitable retreats. London is respectable, judicious and not demonstrative. London and Dublin are old jackets, but one is of serge and the other is of sagging loosened tweed.

The rain pelts down in Dublin nonchalantly and with a show of elegance at first, but in the end it is dense, and gray, and monotonous, like a coated crowd in the streets. A scum of smooth mire moves over the roads and pavements, and the pallid light in the faces of the traipsing clods gives a luster to the streets.

In the morning this is new silver and copper, which squeezes and sings under the soles of one's shoes, circles like pennies on the uppers and dries white like half-crowns. Toward evening, when the sun tramples in yellow rags over the west and infuses into the hazes of smoke and lamp a delicate glory of vapor light, the streets sharply take the hues of the sky and our boots hiss over gold.

At times vacant avenues will shine like empty rivers of pink and raw lavender, and will stare, scared and lagging behind the departing sky. At nightfall the darkness will rise out of the pools like a black dew.

Dublin is a dim city not easily perceived. The rain clarity of the Irish hills is not in Dublin. Today, when there is scarcely a cloud in the sky and the sun is frosty, roofs are palest cerulean, and bare trees are worked like lace on the haze. The houses are vague and shaped oddly by the gleams and shadows of mist This haze never lifts above the chimneys, and the city is gray and blue because of it, a massed infusion of pale light and cold shadow.

The sluggish Liffey might be a runnel of sky. Our city is lifted up to the heavens. Tenements and mans of cloud line its streets. Some days the sky is thick brown and we live in a fulvous underlight, a fog above the roofs which shuts out the air and swallows up the ends of streets and the far sides of squares, till only the bitten fragments of the houses remain.

Lamps are lighted early. The wet yellow light flares up and feeds on the damp. We breathe moisture, and it chills and beads on our faces. The cold eats its way through our clothes; and we are driven indoors to big coal fires, the uneven heat and fitful gesticulations of which identify themselves with our mood. We imagine salamanders.

That shutting off of the sky gives us comfort. Now we are safe from the wildish, imaginative impulses. We cannot now be drawn from our desks to the and there, seeing the caprice and ecstasy of light, think we are living in another world where boots travel seven leagues at a stride and voices echo down interminable corridors of stars.

We are safe now. The lid of our box is down. Now to grimy reality. The world is steady and reasonable. There are no nonchalant alarums. We can sit down with an accurate chart of intentions and duties before us, and make a course to all of them. We shall not find suddenly the sky at our feet.

But next morning it is there, and all the mornings, till people forget to mind the clothes they wear or the things they say. The sky is beneath them, as well as above them. They see new possibilities in the world. Conversations lengthen, stories grow in the telling, an incident becomes a cycle, and a word spoken in the street—the mere pretty insistence of a begging flower girl, with her "Buy a piece, yer honor, an' God keep ye"-will sound like the beginning of a story, the opening of a new stairway into the white skies—till we grayly, inevitably realize it is nothing of the sort.

That is the way of Dublin. How I remember the first smell of the place, a smell of empty warehouses, of horses and of stables; and the first sight of the strutting rustcolored statues with their eighteenth century corpulence. The flat houses, brightly and distinctly windowed, stood like mellowed even sheets of adequate prose with an oratorical warmth to some in memory of Burke and Grattan. And below, a signature to these pensive tablets, the black up-strokes and crossed "t's" of the railings.

For Dublin is a genial satire; and even when reading its bitterest pages we can look down and always see the sky beneath our feet.

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in London

LONDON

Considerable satisfaction was felt at the announcement by the North Eastern Railway that it was intended to purchase only British steel rails, and this satisfaction was increased when it was learned that one of the big railway groups had given an order to Canada for 26,000,000 feet of Douglas fir for railway sleepers. This order exceeds in quantity the whole of British Columbia's export for the United Kingdom in 1923. Hitherto sleepers for British railways have always been made of Baltic pine, and it is also the first time that a great British railway nitely inserted in its conditions of tender that "preference be given to Canadian timbers." It is also stated that the Admiralty has decided to use Douglas fir for the decks and bulkheads of future battleships, and the Board of Trade has agreed to use Douglas fir and spruce for its motor lifeboats and rowing boats. British Columbia's export of timber has risen from 16,000,000 feet in 1923 to 66,000,000 feet in 1925.

No. 10 Downing Street possesses a new carpet or, what is even more desirable: a carpet which has passed into the antique category without having been through the intermediate stage of being old. It happened like this, so Mrs. Baldwin told an enterprising newspaper man recently: Mrs. Baldwin did not like the look of the drawing-room carpet at No. 10, so she asked the Office of Works whether it would provide a new one. The Office of Works, however, being in really commendable awe of Winston Churchill and his economy campaign, demurred, whereupon Mrs. Baldwin said (in effect), "Let the thing be washed." So it was taken up and washed-for the first time in forty years. But when they came to remove the dust that had accumulated underneath, lo and behold there lay a magnificent Persian carpet.

London's new garden suburb at Hendon, northeast from Wembley, has advanced another stage toward realization with the signing by the London County Council of a contract for the construction of a further thousand houses. Eventually there are to be 6000 new houses at Hendon, of which 2000 are to be ready for occupation early next year. As many of them are to be of masonry as bricklayers can be found to construct them. A thousand are to be of steel sheeting on wooden posts. Othersare to be of concrete, while all-wooden houses are also to be tried. The wooden houses are the chief innovation. They are to be two stories in height, and are to contain a living room, parlor and from two to three bedrooms. To reduce risk of fire they are not to be grouped together, but will alternate with brick or steel dwellings.

Britain is replanting the forests it lost during the war. William Ling Taylor, in a paper read at the last meeting of the British Surveyors' Institute, said the ultimate aimed at was the afforestation of 1,770,000 acres of land in Britain not suitable for other cultivation. The total ordinary employment provided in the new forests approximated 2000 men throughout the summer months and over 3000 in the winter. The influence of forestry on rural unemployment was appreciable, but its growth was dependent upon a steady adherence to a settled policy.

4 4 Identity of the myserious "philanthropists" who are financing the "Fellowship of Freedom and Reform," an organization which in recent years has attacked efforts of temperance workers in the British Isles, and especially in Scotland, was disclosed in a recent action for libel before the King's Bench division of the High Court of Justice. Under cross-examination, the plaintiff in the lawsuit admitted that "the fellowship was supported, but he could not say it was largely supported by the brewing industry. The membership was 60,000, and the annual subscription was one shilling. He agreed that the income might be £30,000 a year." Later in the evidence it was brought out that in 1923 the amount actually contributed by the brewers was £20,000. It does not require a profound knowledge of arithmetic to discover that 60,000 members at one shilling a year would bring in receipts of only £3000. This would account for £23,000 of the £30,000 total income. Where did the balance come from? Can it be possible that other liquor interests-distillers or wine merchants-supplied the remaining £7000 because of their great love of freedom and their desire for reform?

The question as to whether the Indian pavilion at the Wembley Exhibition was worth all the money spent on it has been somewhat hotly debated at times in India. But it seems to have been satisfactorily answered by Dewan Bahadur Vijayaraghavacharaya, the Commissioner for India for the British Empire Exhibition. The report he renders shows that all exhibitors are well satisfied. The cottage industries of handmade goods received the finest advertisement they have ever had, and nearly all the big exhibitors have had good results. "To those who believe," runs the report, "that the best interests of India are to be attained within the Empire, and that hand in hand England and India will achieve the highest expression of their genius, there can be no doubt that it was true political wisdom that dictated India's participation."

Florida Bull and Cock Fights Deplored

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: In none of the papers that I see have I found any editorial upon the manifestations of degeneracy that have broken out recently in Florida. Yet these outbreaks cannot be regarded as local in effect. They are of national

Of course, I refer to the bullfights and cockfights in which Florida has been indulging.

The papers report that the worst feature of a bullfight—the gored horses—was not permitted in the Florida affair, and that the bull was not killed but only tortured. Nothing was said about amelioration of the cocks' woes. However, so much so good, as far as the animals were

But I am not thinking as much about the animals just now as about the people who indulge in these brutalities. Such performances appeal only to the cruelty that is still a part of human nature. Only those who have a dangerous kind of cruelty within themselves can find amusement in looking upon cruelties.

Cruelty is at the bottom of every crime-highbrow or lowbrow. These fights involving dumb animals are nothing but a school for cruelty. Cruelty is itself a crime. And all crime is one or other form of cruelty.

Is the United States going to stand aside and permit Florida to establish a school for crime within its borders? New York, N. Y. RALPH MODJESKI.

Regarding the So-Called Branch-Banking Bill To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

The item recently published on page one of the Monitor under the caption, "Branch Banking Bill Is Reported to House," reminds me of a very interesting article bearing directly on the subject, which was published in the Magazine of Wall Street, issue of Nov. 7, 1925.

The writer of this article points out that, paradoxical as it may seem, the McFadden bill "is not a pro-branch banking bill," as is commonly supposed. He writes:

banking bill," as is commonly supposed. He writes:

Subjected to a fire from the rear because somebody unhappily called it a branch banking bill, it almost got through the last session of Congress.

Contrary to the public impression, the McFadden bill is not a pro-branch banking bill, and is as a matter of fact an anti-branch banking bill. Its general purpose is to strengthen the Federal Reserve System by barricading the national banks against the steady advance of the state banks and trust companies, an advance that forebodes the elimination of national banks. Curbing branch banking is only one of a number of ways in which the McFadden bill seeks to guard and foster the national banks.

only one of a number of ways in which the McFadden bill seeks to guard and foster the national banks. . .

It purposes to fight fire with fire in this regard; to permit national banks to use one of the most effective devices of the enemy in fighting back, that is the establishment of branches themselves, wherever necessary as a defensive measure. And that is how it has come to be handleapped by the appellation of a branch banking bill. . .
